Time, place and movement are among the recurring themes in the many excellent exhibitions by and about LGBTQ artists currently on show at the world's top museums. Celebrating queer Greeks and Black fembots, resurrecting underappreciated AIDS-era artists, and reframing folklore and ancestral memory from Haiti, India and Turtle Island, these are the can't-miss shows for early 2023.

Blaffer Art Museum; Houston

Also currently on show at the Blaffer is this monumental video by multimedia artist Jacolby Satterwhite, in which digital bodysuits translate the artist's dance movements into animated, Black fembot forms, bringing together voguing, 3D animation and drawing to explore the movement of his own queer body.

Through March 12.
