

MITCHELL-INNES & NASH

AnOther

Brilliant Things to Do This July

From inspiring group exhibitions to invigorating new eateries, here's our guide to July's most exciting cultural and culinary offerings

JULY 04, 2023 | Daisy Woodward

Kevin Kwabia, Kwasi, 2022. Courtesy of the artist and Mitchell-Innes & Nash, New York.

Worldmaking at Mitchell-Innes & Nash, New York: July 13 – August 25, 2023

In New York City, Mitchell-Innes & Nash's summer show is turning the spotlight on Ghana or, more specifically, ten of the country's most exciting emerging artists, whose work traverses painting, sculpture, photography, video and installation. Co-curated by Ghanaian artist Gideon Appah and curator and gallery director Ylinka Barotto, Worldmaking explores Ghana's environment "in light of Western consumption, architectural influences that derive from years-long domination, colonial impact on ecosystems and economies, and the use of traditions as conduits to preserving the past and understanding the present".